ANOTHER EXCURSION TO MEXICO CITY

Garnett King Tells of His Plans While in the Smelter City.

Garnett King, general agent of the El Paso and Southwestern railroad, arrived in Douglas this morning from El Paso and went on to Bisbee. Mr. King comes to this section now in the interest of the excursion to the City of Mexico which will be run by the Southwestern, leaving Douglas on January 12th, the start being made from Benson on that date.

This will be the fourth personally conducted excursion that the Southwestern has sent into the southern republic and it will doubtless prove as profitable and pleasing to the excursionists as any of the previous trips.

This excursion will be personally conducted by Mr. King, who has made several trips of the kind, which will enable him to direct the excursionists as to how best to see the interesting sights of the trip.

The special will start from Benson on the 12th of January, stopping at the different towns on the Southwestern east of there and will pick up the excursionists along the way. The fare from Benson will be $40 and $35 from Hachita.

The excursion will last thirty days and during that time the party will be furnished the opportunity of seeing all of the interesting points in Mexico.

HENS WITH RABIES BARK ALOUD

WESTPORT, Conn., Dec. 28.—Sixty hens with rabies on the farm of E. N. Supperly, emitting squawks half way between a cackle and a bark were killed in a flock yesterday. Over a week ago a mad dog was chased through the neighborhood, and at that time it was known that he had bitten a number of pigs on the place. The pigs and the hens had always been friendly, especially at meal times, and as a result the pigs grow ferocious and chased the hens. Several were bitten and these in turn have communicated the disease to the others.

(Special Correspondence.)

TOMBSTONE, Dec. 28.—Hung Lin, a citizen of the Celestial Empire, who was confined in the county jail, being held as a United States prisoner, charged with being unlawfully in the country, committed suicide last night by hanging himself. He was confined in one of the steel tanks on the west side of the jail, in the door of which is a small barred opening which is about four feet from the ground. When the door of the tank is shut, it is impossible for the guards to look into the tank without going directly up to this small opening. Lin made considerable preparations for taking his life. He first removed all of his clothing; next he undid his queue, and passing it around one of the small bars in the opening in the door, and then around his throat, tied it together. He then slid his feet out from under him and let the weight of his body hang by the queue until he had choked to death. The front part of the neck was cut somewhat by the silk cord which bound the end of his queue. He must have been game to deliberately allow himself to choke to death when by raising up on his feet he could have removed what suffering he must have endured, but his feet were slid out as far as he could make them go. The body was found soon after the deed was done, by the guards of the jail when they changed shifts about midnight.

Lin was arrested in this city on Saturday last by Chinese Inspector Connel at the depot just as he stepped from the train, where a vegetable Chinese from Fairbank was there to meet him. It has developed since that Lin had just come across the line from Hermosillo, Mexico, evidently eluding the immigration inspectors along the line, as he had no "chick" check. Last night Immigration Inspector Connel visited the jail and took the measurements of Lin so as to keep a description of him. This proceedings, no doubt, caused the chink to think that something dreadful was about to happen, perhaps that Connel was taking his measurement for a coffin and that he would be ready for it in the morning. At any rate he has saved the government the expense of his deportation, but will probably cost the county the expense of his burial unless the friends of the deceased at Fairbank take charge of the funeral. Lin was to have his examination before the court commissioner the next day.

As soon as the body was discovered Coroner McFarland was notified, who with a jury viewed the remains at the jail, and then adjourned to the coroner's office bringing in a verdict to the effect that the deceased's name was Hung Lin, and that he came to his death by strangulation caused by himself with suicidal intent.

A request, unique in the history of the executive office, was made of Governor Kibbey at Phoenix, Monday, by three Yavapai county Apache-Mohave Indians, residents of the Verde Valley, near Cottonwood. These Indians made the trip to Phoenix for the one purpose of requesting Governor Kibbey to aid them in securing the establishment of an Indian school near Camp Verde, that the Indian children in the Verde Valley might receive the benefit of an education.

It has been generally supposed that the older Indians, if not actually opposed to the "white man's school," were at least not in favor of it, but this request has proved that at least one notable exception to the general rule prevails. Since Justin Head, the Carlisle graduate, shot and killed five Indians in the Verde Valley, for which crime he is now serving a life sentence in the Territorial penitentiary, it was thought that the Verde Indians would never countenance an education of their offspring, as they attributed to Head's education, or at least, so it was alleged by some, the estrangement from his people which led to the crimes, but the request of the three Indians, Chief Novak, Second Chief John Cava and Pterocotilla, disproves this erstwhile belief.

Chief Novak made an eloquent appeal for school facilities for the younger children of his tribe. He called attention to the fact that he had been active for years in sending larger numbers of children to the Indian school at Phoenix, and he mentioned many other facts to prove that he was in full sympathy with the ways of civilization. But, he said, it is not only a hardship to send the very small children away from home, but was in fact impossible to a large extent so that until they are considerably past the ordinary school age they must go with their parents to the Indian school. He stated that there are at least thirty young children in the immediate vicinity of Camp Verde, and he strongly urged that a school building be constructed there, as a good school established therein. He said he had found from long observation that education was a good thing for the Indian—although he was without education himself—and it was good for the Indian to adapt himself to the white man's ways, and to work for his living. He was warmly responded by Captain John and by the interpreter.

The Governor promised to lay the matter before the authorities at Washington, and to do all in his power to have the school established, and he complimented all three of his visitors upon their public spirit.

Chief Novak imparted the pleasing information that the Mohave-Apaches under his jurisdiction are prosperous and contented. They find work in the
